Seawall For 3 Beaches?

PROPOSAL REFERRED TO
CITY MANAGER RHODES
FOR COST ESTIMATE

A proposition by the public improvement committee of the Mission Beach Chamber of Commerce for the construction of a substantial seawall and esplanade was presented to the city council early this week. The petitioners requested that the city vote bonds to pay two-thirds of the cost of a seawall and the Mission Beach district the other third. The council is reported to look with favor upon the proposition, and at the suggestion of Mayor Bacon the matter was referred to City Manager Rhodes for an estimate of the cost of the projected improvement.

OCEAN BEACH INTERESTED

Considerable interest is being manifested by property owners in Ocean Beach over the contemplated construction of a seawall at the adjoining beach across the inlet, and it is strongly suggested that the time is now most opportune for the building of a seawall and esplanade under the same plan and conditions as sanctioned for Mission Beach. No definite action has been taken by anyone concerned, yet it is very likely that CO-OPERATION between the two beaches would result in Ocean Beach being able to secure this highly desirable improvement along the ocean front. Conditions are somewhat the same on the seashore at both beaches and each is confronted with the great advantage to be derived from a permanent seawall and esplanade.

PACIFIC BEACH WANTS WALL

A petition was sent this week by Pacific Beach residents to the city council asking for a sea wall to extend northward from the proposed Mission Beach shore improvement. It is suggested that the three beaches—Mission Beach, Ocean Beach and Pacific Beach—be included in the plan for a city bond issue and district assessment.

Attention is called to the display announcement in another column of the opening today of Pat's Bakery and Delicatessen Store at 5010 Newport avenue, Ocean Beach. Mrs. McCune states that a full line of first-class bakery goods will be placed on the sale fresh daily, the bakery plant on Bacon street being enlarged with the addition of the former store. Many specials will be carried in the new location at 5010 Newport avenue, where Mrs. Erker will conduct the delicatessen department. Freshly-cooked foods will be served every day by Mrs. Erker, who states that customers will also have the choice of a complete assortment of table relishes and delicatessen goods. Prompt service and courteous attention are assured by Mrs. McCune and Mrs. Erker at all times.

WISE BUSINESS MEN ADVERTISE CONTINUALLY

Despite the unprecedented success of the Ford Motor company and its constantly increasing sales, Henry Ford continues to advertise. Why? No one has a better understanding of the value of continued advertising. Henry Ford knows what makes the business wheels go around. He knows that printer's ink in the form of advertising is the motive force that makes sales. And just as he understands that gasoline is needed to make an automobile go, he knows that advertising is essential to make business hum.

IT WAS THE THIRTEENTH

Last Saturday was February the THIRTEENTH, year ending 26, just twice thirteen! Remember, it was the date of the "big waves" at the beaches. You're not superstitious, of course. This is just recorded as a matter of statistics.

HELPING HANDS

Charles Rutherford and Harry M. Dort hurried from their San Diego auto livery headquarters at First and C, through wind and water, to Mission Beach, in order to help their old friend, John DeMent, stem the high tide.

TIMELY RESCUES

Stories of heroism and timely rescue during the peak of the tide flew thick and fast after the wild waters receded. A cottage by the sea, in which resided Mrs. Ruth Scott and Mrs. Lola Storie, was tipped endways and the occupants were rescued by Hobart N. Justice and Edward B. Foster, of Ocean Beach.

OCEAN BEACH UNSCATHED

No serious damage was done to the seashore line of Ocean Beach by last Saturday's storm-driven tide, and thousands of sightseers took advantage of the splendid view of the booming surf at Sunset Cliffs and along the high points of the ocean front.

CONCERT AND MUSICAL

BY TREBLE CLEF CLUB

Cara Matthews Garrett, instructor of piano at the San Diego Army and Navy academy, arranged a very interesting concert which was given at the academy last evening, Feb. 19, at 7:45 o'clock. The Treble Clef club of the State college, under the direction of Miss Deborah Smith, and also the girls' quartet from the same institution, were delightfully heard. They had as their soloist Miss Mildred Kay, who possesses a fine dramatic soprano voice. The violin students were also heard in several groups of ensemble numbers. Miss Bessie Doby, of Wichita, Kansas, who recently has come to San Diego to make her home, proved a splendid solo pianist for the concert. Many friends of the institution and lovers of music enjoyed the excellent program.

Wind And Wave Whip Ocean Front Property

SEASHORE HOUSES

AND BIG BOARD WALK BATTERED BY BREAKERS

An exceptional series of high tides reached their peak with a height of nearly seven feet last Saturday morning between 8 and 9 o'clock, when the rush of rapidly rising waters, whipped by a westerly wind, caused considerable damage to ocean front property throughout the beach districts of San Diego, from the top of Torrey Pines to the tip of Point Loma.

However, heeding the warnings that had been sent out regarding a storm blowing in from the Pacific and down the coast, most beach folks of this section were properly prepared for any ordinary invasion of the sea, but the somewhat unusual suddenness and terrific fierceness of old ocean's onslaught last week-end rather upset all calculations and left a very topsy-turvy shore line, especially in the north end of Mission Beach.

Numbers of houses built on the sands adjacent to the board walk suffered from their foundations being washed away, and some were skewed and shifted about at all sorts of angles, while others were badly battered and partly demolished. The long board walk became a victim to the beating of the big breakers, huge sections being torn out and thrown helter-skelter upon the sands along Strandway.

Despite the quite extensive damage done to seashore property by the storm of wind and wave, it can be happily recorded that there were no serious accidents and not a life was lost.

A BLESSING IN DISGUISE

In the storm at Mission Beach last Saturday, resulting from high seas, only five houses along the ocean front were unharmed or slightly damaged. About four houses will probably be wrecked for lumber, and the remainder of the badly damaged houses can be jacked up and repaired. Many of the lots are partly washed away, but these can easily be filled in, and with a seawall to protect all the ocean front, we will have "a better Mission Beach" than ever before, and lots will climb higher in price. It takes something like a storm to awaken people, and without a mishap we would never have a seawall, so the high seas were a blessing in disguise, and the greatest blessing of all is that no one was injured.

SOLID BUILDING IN FUTURE

"A better Mission Beach" should now be our slogan, and when the seawall and esplanade are erected, people will build better homes and will use the proper foundation (cement piling driven down from eight to thirteen feet to gravel) and also will put a substantial bulkhead along the ocean front of each home. It is a fact that the homes having good bulkheads withstood the storm in spite of no seawall, and the Amusement park was unharmed on account of the substantial seawall and esplanade.

Thos. E. Thorpe, of Pasadena, is now in charge of the Mission Beach drug store on Mission boulevard.

GOOD SAMARITANS

The San Diego Consolidated Gas and Electric company is due great appreciation by all property owners. During the high tides the company's trucks arrived with thousands of sacks and distributed them as near the ocean front as possible, telling the property owners to help themselves. Manager Fred Rhodes of the city operating department and Bob Gregory also distributed thousands of sacks, and the timely arrival of the city and the gas company forces saved more homes than anything else. Mayor Bacon, all the councilmen, and all the city employees obtainable came over, hundreds strong, and immediately started filling bags with sand and making bulkheads. The clever idea suggested by Mayor Bacon, in having the city employees remove the planks from the board walk and bulkhead with them the outer piles that supported the board walk, saved a lot of the property. A day and a half after the high tide driven by the gale, there has been from a foot to two feet of sand washed back against the temporary bulkhead. George W. Doss, prominent Pacific Beach building contractor, with the aid of sacks and a crew of ten men, saved Harry K. Turner's new home. Chief James Patrick arrived on the scene with his able-bodied officers, and they were very efficient in saving the furnishings and personal belongings from the hordes of pilferers and robbers that naturally follow a catastrophe, homes on the boulevard and bay side having been broken into and robbed during the excitement on the ocean front. Chief Patrick also sent a large patrol out Saturday and Sunday nights. The wonderful spirit of neighborliness from San Diego, Ocean Beach and Mission Beach people will never be forgotten, for they were surely Good Samaritans.

OCEAN BEACH SCHOOL NOTES

Written for "The Beach News"
By Harvey Rubin, 6A Grade

The 3B grade is making a Holland sand table. There will be dykes, canals, windmills and other interesting things made, and dolls dressed to show Dutch costumes.

The 4A is studying about Mesopotamia. The members of the class will build a sand table showing the Tigris and Euphrates rivers; also they will have the wharf at Bagdad, keleps and koofahs. They made a koofah of clay. One of the children composed the following rhyme:

Peggy went across the street,
With roller skates upon her feet;
She couldn't keep her balance well,
And, what do you think, she slipped and fell.

The 5A grade is going to take a trip around the United States. They will start at Washington and see the government buildings. In the Capitol they will see the house of representatives. Then they will go to Baltimore to see the oyster beds.

FORMER O. B. RESIDENT

PRAYS FOR PRESERVATION OF GARDEN SPOT

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 12, 1926.

Mr. Kirk Smith,
Editor "The Beach News":

Dear Sir: In answer to a letter you published by "Zenas," on Feb. 6, in regard to a destructive sidewalk and paving menace—"the eucalyptus tree"—I am rather wondering if this "Zenas" has not reached his zenith of years and has to some extent wandered down the other side.

The large trees in the eastern cities are not found on our western coast. California in many ways lacks in this stalwart vegetation. The eucalyptus is the only fast-growing, tall tree that we have. This species is best known in Southern California and truly represents this section of the country in a charm and colorful elegance, giving us a felicity its own.

While talking to the Polish artist Schelwesky a few weeks ago, I asked for his criticism of our state. He went ahead to tell me all the faults, but concluded with, "I have traveled many miles and many years but never have I seen a tree so beautiful as what you call the eucalyptus. It is beauty in itself, with a grace its own, and it has greatly intrigued me to stay a while on Southern California."

Muir avenue, named after the great writer and lover of nature, has been many times called the "garden spot" of Ocean Beach. When I was a student in the grammar school of your town some years ago, I loved to walk up that same street after the rain and drink in the fragrance of those leaves, and I will never forget the view from the hillside. The rest of the town wound and tied with electric light and telephone wires, while this one narrow strip seemed saved from the commercial turmoil. It has been said that the seed-pods that fall are hard to walk on. My only answer to that is that life has become rather pessimistic if an acorn will cause a resentful and malicious disposition.

Are not these trees preserving the traditions of our state? What if the roots do push up a small portion of our sidewalks? The crack may do us good, for if it happened in my holdings I would congratulate the tree for serried strength and would be more than willing to patch what nature had so delightfully broken.

Why is it that we, in our mad rush to commercialize the world, should cut down nature's beauty, in order that a flat, colorless mass of cement may lie undisturbed?

I cannot believe the people residing on Muir avenue are so preposterous as wishing to destroy the only garden spot in their little town.

Sincerely,

J. S. WHITE, JR.

Painted Hats for Paris

Some fashionable Parisiennes have decided to wear painted hats this winter and to dispense with all such trimmings as buckles and feathers. This mode is not expected to be popular with the milliners, for, with a few deft strokes, it is said, an artist can transform a shabby velvet or felt hat into something chic and seemingly brand new. Some women probably will want to possess hat masterpieces, decorated and signed by fashionable painters at usual fashionable prices.

Diagram Showing How to Install the UX 112 Tube, Using Storage "A" Battery.

This Diagram Shows the Dry Cell Tube Set Rewired for UX 120 Power Tube.

By EDGAR H. FELIX
In Philadelphia Record.

The superior quality of reception obtainable with loud volume by the substitution of UX 112 and UX 120 tubes for UV 201-A and UV 199 tubes, respectively, in the last stage of audio-frequency amplification, makes their installation of interest to every owner of a receiver having two or more stages of audio-frequency amplification. Several important changes must be made in the wiring of the receiving set to adapt the circuits and power supply to the needs of the new tubes.

The UX 112 is the big brother of the UV 201-A tube. The filament current consumption of the new tubes is half an ampere, only double that of the economical UV 201-A. To secure satisfactory results with the UX 112 tube, 135 volts of plate potential are required, as compared with 90 volts usually used with the UV 201-A. Furthermore, unless the 9 volt "C" battery is used in connection with it, the UX 112 is a heavy user of "B" battery current and distorts considerably. By the addition of the "C" battery, however, a large size "B" battery can power this tube for a year or more. It is not necessary to use an extra large or heavy duty size "B" battery for furnishing the extra 45 volts required by this tube.

The method of connecting an extra 45 volt "B" battery is as follows: (1) Examine the socket which holds the tube used in the final stage of amplification and identify the plate terminal, usually marked "P." (2) Disconnect the wire attached to this terminal. (3) Connect the positive terminal of the new extra 45 volt "B" battery to the plate socket terminal. (4) Connect the negative terminal of the new "B" battery with the wire which you have just disconnected from the plate socket terminal. This gives a total voltage of 135 volts on the UX 112 tube, but it does not increase the plate voltage of the UV 201-A tube in the first stage of audio-frequency amplification.

Adding the Extra "C" Battery.

A somewhat similar method is pursued in adding the extra 45 volt "C" battery. The new "C" battery is connected in series with the one already installed; the existing connections of the latter with the first stage of amplification are not disturbed. The secondary of the second audio-frequency transformer, however, is disconnected from the -4 1/2 volt terminal of the original "C" battery, a new lead being run from that secondary terminal to -9 volt terminal of the new "C" battery.

For dry cell tube sets using UV 199 tubes, the new UX 120 is used in the last stage. This also requires 135 volts plate potential obtainable from a large size "B" battery. The same instructions for connecting the extra 45 volt "B" battery for the UX 112 apply to the UX 120.

The UX 120 requires a 22 1/2 volt "C" battery. Substitute for your present "C" battery a 22 1/2 volt tapped "B" battery made up of large size cells. This assures you of long shelf life. There is practically no current withdrawn from the "C" battery, and consequently, its usefulness is determined by its shelf life.

A "C" battery is connected in the reverse direction as compared with a "B" battery. The "B" battery is connected with the plus to the plate and the minus toward the filament. The "C" battery, on the other hand, is connected with the negative terminal toward the grid and the +22 1/2 volts to the filament. The full voltage of the battery is impressed upon the grid if the grid return is made to the minus connection of the battery, since its plus lead is connected with the filament. The usual circuit, starting at the grid, runs from the grid socket terminal to the secondary of the audio-frequency transformer; the other terminal of the transformer secondary to the correct terminal of the "C" battery, while the positive of the "C" battery goes to the negative "A" battery lead.

The UV 199 tube used in the first stage of amplification should have a 4 1/2 volt negative bias, but does not work with a 22 1/2 volt bias. Three cells give the required 4 1/2 volts.

Securing 4 1/2 Volts for First Stage.

The novice may be confused by the markings on the battery when he is directed to connect the grid return of the first amplifier tube with the +18 terminal of the "C" battery in order to obtain 4 1/2 volts negative bias. As compared with +22 1/2, however, 18 volts is 4 1/2 volts less or negative. Consequently, to secure a grid bias of 4 1/2 volts, we connect the grid return to the 18 volt tap of the 22 1/2 volt battery. The 21 volt tap is 1 1/2 volts negative, as compared with +22 1/2; the 19 1/2 volt tap, 3 volts negative, and the 18 volt tap, 4 1/2 volts negative. If you now have no "C" battery in the first stage, simply disregard this part of the process.

The grid return from the secondary of the second stage transformer is connected with the negative terminal of the 22 1/2 volt battery. This gives 22 1/2 volts negative bias, the amount required by the UX 120. The method of identifying this terminal has already been described in connection with the instructions for installing the 4 1/2 volt "C" battery for the UX 112.

National Radio Fading

Tests Start February 9

Dates for the national tests of radio reception to determine the causes of static and fading were announced recently after 4,000 of the 4,500 designated observation stations had expressed a willingness to take part in the survey, which is being conducted by the Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation in co-operation with the Northwestern university. The first test will be held on the night of February 9, from 8 to 11 p. m. central standard time. The second and third will be on the two succeeding nights at the same hours. Subsequent trials will be held throughout the winter, should the data obtained indicate that real progress in a search for the causes of these two major radio annoyances is possible.

It was originally planned to hold these tests in January, but owing to the international tests scheduled for that month it was decided to hold the fading and static tests at a later date. Most of the observations will be made by broadcast listeners using standard receiving sets and depending for the accuracy of their reports upon their own ears. However, to insure the scientific accuracy of the result, 20 control stations equipped with electrical measuring devices and automatic recorders will be placed in the principal broadcasting centers of the country.

Safety First!

Safety first in testing a new circuit. Place some sort of a protective device in series with the negative lead of the B battery. If a short circuit exists between the filament and high potential B battery the protective device will give warning and protect the tubes.

The Storage Battery

The storage battery of a radio set requires greater attention than the automobile battery, because there is no generator to keep it charged as the current is used.

Pain in Back or Side?

Oakland, Calif.—"From the time I developed into womanhood I suffered from feminine trouble and for several years I was not able to conquer it. My back ached, I had pains in my side, inflammation, was extremely nervous, weak and ran down, and would be under the doctor's care about every six weeks. One day I saw Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription advertised and decided to give it a trial and from that time on I began to mend, and was made well and strong. Have never suffered from any feminine trouble since. 'Favorite Prescription' is the only medicine for weak women to take."—Mrs. Chas. Kutschmar, 920 E. 10th St.

Overcoming Tuberculosis

Tuberculosis in the Irish Free State is gradually lessening, statistics show. In 1919 one in about every seventy of the population was affected by some form of the disease, while in 1923 the proportion had diminished to about one in every ninety. The decrease in deaths from all forms of tuberculosis in five years was 1,371. In 1923 the tuberculosis death rate was 1.41 a 1,000.

Suspensions About Wall Street and How They Arise

By FRANCIS H. Sisson, President
Trust Company Division, American Bankers Association

WOULD-BE economists, political orators and the general public make frequent positive assertions about the functions of Wall Street without any realization of what constitutes Wall Street or what purpose it serves. Lack of knowledge breeds suspicion. Yet it is not difficult to understand the nature and function of Wall Street. Let us set down a few of the facts which account for the existence and nation-wide, as well as international, services of Wall Street.

F. H. Sisson

There are 316 banks in New York with combined capital and surplus of about $1,400,000,000. Their deposits aggregate over $11,500,000,000, and during 1924 their total volume of business reached nearly $250,000,000,000. The New York Stock Exchange in 1925 sold 463,000,000 shares of stock and in 1924 $3,828,000,000 worth of bonds. Wall Street is the national credit and money market. It is just as essential that there be markets for money and for stocks, bonds, mortgages and other securities as for cotton, corn, tobacco, wheat, hogs and other commodities.

If Wall Street were destroyed, Wall Street is the natural evolution of the forces of trade and finance. It exists because there is imperative need for it in the nation's business. If some cataclysm should destroy the financial district of New York we would see frantic efforts to re-establish it so that trade and industry could continue. If the production and marketing of agricultural and industrial commodities did not need such a financial institution, Wall Street would not exist.

We depend upon the farmer to help maintain the general level of prosperity. Wall Street as a money market is called upon to finance the growth and marketing of farm crops. Many Wall Street bankers were born and raised on farms. If they were not thoroughly familiar with agricultural requirements, they could not hold their present positions in the financial world.

In the period of deflation, Wall Street suffered proportionately as much as the farmer. The aggregate losses of Wall Street banks amounted to a staggering sum. Wall Street is not an independent institution, but an organic part of the country's business system, necessarily reflecting the ups and downs of business.

Four Billion Dollars

An approximate estimate of the main items in Wall Street's financial operations in handling farm crops shows that New York banks for the purpose of agriculture put out commercial loans to the value of one billion dollars; hold bankers' acceptances for another billion; buy commercial paper such as cattle and sheep loans for a third billion and carry balances of country banks for a fourth billion. Thus Wall Street furnishes a $4,000,000,000 river of credit annually to produce farm products and float them to market.

The outward flow to rural banks enables them to make the required advances on farm crops and for warehousing and handling cotton, tobacco, wheat, raisins, prunes and countless other products. Outside of his own personal efforts on his farm, Wall Street is the biggest single factor in the prosperity of the farmer. After these commodities have been moved to market, the money used in handling them returns to Wall Street for investment. New York is the largest security market in the country and offers a use and market for the idle capital of the rural banks between crops.

Funds from every part of the country flow to New York, attracted by the greater opportunity for their profitable use found in this center. Thus the accumulations of deposits are large, and in turn the openings for the employment of these funds in the facilitation of trade, industry and investment are upon a correspondingly ample scale. It is clear that these funds must be employed sanely, constructively and to the real service of the business community. Otherwise they would inevitably soon be withdrawn.

Huge Investments Help Farmers

These huge investment operations in Wall Street are of significance to the farmer. Much of the $10,000,000,000 invested in farm mortgages was advanced by Eastern financial institutions. In no sense is Wall Street's interest in agriculture local or sectional. The main function of New York financial institutions is to send money where it is most needed.

Another service rendered to agriculture by Wall Street is the purchase of Farm Loan bonds, Joint Stock Land Bank bonds and the debentures of the Intermediate Credit Banks. There is a total of $1,451,800,000 of this paper outstanding, of which New York banks took about one billion.

Wall Street loans to country banks are made at low rates, usually below 4 1/2 per cent. The local banker's rates to his customers are adjusted to local conditions, which cannot justly be laid at the door of Wall Street.

General financial service to other industries related to agriculture also helps the farmer substantially. Wall Street loans to the packers, railroads, millers and farm-machinery manufacturers to help them serve agriculture.

Wall Street is as necessary and serviceable in the handling of credit and capital as is the cold-storage plant in caring for seasonal perishable products. The necessity of such a credit center in a country with a $60,000,000,000 annual business is obvious.

What the People Want

Every great international bank in New York maintains close relations with thousands of other banks in the United States and in every foreign country of any importance. The movements of commerce and investment are supported upon this interrelated system of domestic and foreign banks. Thus it comes about that the products of the farm, factory and mine are financed by these banks all the way from the producer to the foreign consumer.

Wall Street in the discharge of its true functions as the nation's reservoir of capital and credit includes the whole business community in its field of operations. Its control lies with the people. Their demands govern it, and their presence or absence from the market determines its trends. Wall Street prospers as farming and industry prosper. Its service is to the people of the whole country and, for them, to the people of other countries. It is the direct reflection of American agriculture, industry and commerce.—From the Country Gentleman.

ON "BAD LUCK"

"The Brownes are the unluckiest people I ever saw," remarked Emmy, as she and Aunt Emmy walked by their house. "They were just getting on their feet after James lost so much money in stocks. Maud told me only last week that he was putting his savings in government bonds now. Yesterday his office was robbed and the bonds stolen out of his desk. Five $100 bonds gone. It's the only money they have been able to save since he lost his savings in that radio stock."

"That certainly is bad luck, if you call it bad luck," commented Aunt Emmy. "I call it stupidity, myself."

"Stupidity? why Aunt Emmy, how could James know that thieves would get in his office?" exclaimed Emmy. "It doesn't seem stupid to me."

"I don't want to be too hard on James, my child, but if he had only used ordinary precautions, he need not have lost what was for him a large amount of money on that radio stock and he surely need not have had those bonds stolen."

"Why Aunt James isn't a mind reader or a fortune teller."

"No, of course he isn't. But neither is every successful business man a seer. Luck is ninety per cent common sense. If James had gone to his banker and asked him to look up the radio company whose stock he was thinking of buying, the chances are that he never would have bought it after he got the bank's report. Banks can get the record of any company issuing stock and if the company is not well financed, if it has not been paying dividends, if the officers of the company are not men with clean, honest records, the bank can find that out. The radio company that James invested in made a disgraceful failure a month after he bought his stock. If he had taken the trouble to find out something about it first, doubtless he would have had that money today."

"Well, Aunt, that may be true about the stock, but who in the world would anticipate thieves?"

"Anybody who reads the papers to-day knows that thieves are pretty active," said Aunt Emmy dryly. "Why ignore them? If James had kept his bonds in a safe place, at a bank, he would have had them yet. James has been careless, if not actually stupid. His bad luck is mostly James himself."—Anne B. Aymes.

BANKERS HELP

The Minnesota Bankers Association at its annual convention adopted the following resolution:

"We believe it to be the duty of every banker in the state of Minnesota to co-operate with our Agricultural Committee and to call the attention of its farmer patrons to the excellent work being done by our Agricultural College, and the means thereby available for the improvement of farming conditions and for the practical education of the boys and girls from the farms."

DON'T KILL THE BIRDS

Department of agriculture estimates give seventy-five billion as the probable number of birds in the world, about forty times the number of people. They estimate five billion birds in the United States alone.

Birds are mankind's best friends. Practically every bird is a costless, automatic, self-perpetuating bug and worm killer, without whose aid the country would soon swarm with insect plagues like those of Egypt in the times of Pharaoh.

He's a Brick

"He's a brick" is not a new expression. Lycurgus, king of Sparta, was visited by an ambassador from Ephesus who marveled at the absence of massive brick protective walls around the city. Asked why there were none, the king pointed to his army and said: "There are the walls of Sparta, and every man a brick."

Inset Plaited Panel Imparts Smart Style to the Blouse

Dame Fashion pleases to announce a revival of the blouse among smart items for spring. Good news this! The separate blouse has ever been a favorite theme with the woman who studies the art of good dressing from a practical as well as a modish standpoint. Along with this welcome style proclamation comes the word that it is the crepe de chine tailored blouse which will play the most popular role.
Furthermore, the mode explicitly declares that plaiting and fine tucks will play an important part in the styling of the smart crepe de chine blouse.

New in the way of plaited treatment are panels inset at each side of the front and across the back of the blouse, starting at yoke depth. The picture bespeaks the effectiveness of this unique arrangement, which accents the tailored note so consistently.

THE PROFESSIONAL RECALL

By REX T. STOUT

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

THEY met at Quimby's unexpectedly, for the first time in three months, and after the handshake proceeded to their old table in the corner.

"Well, how goes it?" asked Bandy. "Bandy," said Dudd Bronson, ignoring the question, "I am the greatest man in the world. I, myself, am for ham and cabbage, since it tickles my feelings, but it you want anything from peacocks' hearts to marmalade, it's on me."

Bandy stared at the roll of bills Dudd brought out of his trousers' pocket. "Dudd," he said, his voice trembling, "I respect you. Please put it in your breast pocket so I can see the bulge. What was the occurrence?"

"I hate to tell it," declared Dudd. "Bandy, I am a modest man. When you admire me most, remember I said that."

"The pity of it is that there was no one to watch me. I done it in solitude."

"One day, about two weeks ago, I walks into the sanctum of David Jetmore. Jetmore is the best lawyer in Horton, over in Jersey. He's one of them fat, bulgy men that looks right through you with a circumambious gaze."

"Mr. Jetmore," says I, "my name is Abe Delman. I been running it a store over in Pauline with my brother Leo. We had a fight over a personal matter which ain't to the purpose, and when Leo began lookin' for me in an unpeaceful manner I came away for my health. Now I want to get my half of the store which I am broke till I get it, and you should write to Leo's lawyer, who is Mr. Devlin of Horton, about a settlement."

"Have you something for a retainer?" asks Jetmore.

"No," says I, "I'm livin' at a hotel."

"I'm a busy man," says Jetmore. "and how do I know I'll get any money?"

"Mr. Jetmore," says I, "that store's worth three thousand dollars if it's worth a cent. And if my half ain't enough, maybe you can get Leo to give you some of his."

"Finally, after I explained promiscuously why I had to keep at an unsafe distance from brother Leo, and other delicate points, Jetmore says he'll take the job. When he says Devlin, Leo's lawyer in Horton, is a personal friend of his, I told him that made it all the better."

"That same afternoon about four hours later I walks into Devlin's office in Horton."

"Mr. Devlin," says I, "my name is Leo Delman. I been running it a store over in Pauline with my brother Abe. We had a fight over a personal matter which ain't to the purpose, and Abe left for parts unknown. Two days ago comes a letter from Abe's lawyer, Mr. Jetmore of Horton, about Abe's share in the store, which he didn't want to take with him, and I told him to write to you, because you should make it a settlement for me."

"Bandy, these lawyers is all the same. All they think about is what's in it for them. They're parasites, Bandy. They're a menace to society."

"Have you something for a retainer?" asks Devlin.

"Mr. Devlin," says I, "I have not."

"Then," says he, "how do you expect to settle with brother Abe?"

"Bandy, I know you won't repeat this to any of our friends, or I wouldn't tell it. It fills me with shame, Bandy, when I remember that fifty I handed to Devlin. These lawyers is the worst kind of grafters."

"I told Devlin I didn't want any Pauline natives to know about mine and Abe's intimate perinacities, and I waits in Horton for a settlement. As soon as he got my fifty he wrote off a long letter to Jetmore which he let me read to correct the sentiments."

"It was last Thursday when I got to Devlin's sanctum just in time to see him puttin' on his coat to go to lunch with the stenographer."

"Hello, Delman," says he, "I'll see you in about half an hour. Here's a letter from Jetmore. Make yourself at home till I get back."

"When he'd gone I read the letter over just to make sure there wasn't no changes since I saw it the night before in Jetmore's office. It said that Abe had decided to accept Leo's offer of twelve hundred dollars cash, provided it was paid within three days."

"I goes to the stenographer's desk, picks out a nice printed letterhead, and writes on it as follows:

March 21, 1925.

Mr. David Jetmore,

Horton, N. J.

Dear Sir—

As per advice contained in your favor of the 20th inst., I am enclosing herewith check for twelve hundred dollars in full payment of the claim of Abe Delman against Leo Delman.

I shall be pleased to have you acknowledge receipt of same.

Yours very truly,

Abe Delman

"I had already practiced Devlin's hand till I was sick of it, and I signed that letter so that Devlin himself couldn't a' told the difference. Then I pulls out a blank check, makes it to the order of Devlin for twelve hundred dollars and signs it 'Leo Delman' and indorses Devlin's name on the back."

"Of course, I could have done some of this work in my own bodwar, but I wanted to use Devlin's typewriter, and besides, I had a feeling it would be more gentleman-like to do every thing right there in the office.

"When Devlin come back I had the letter all ready to mail stowed away in my pocket."

"Have you got that twelve hundred?" says he.

"No," says I, "but I'll get it in three days or bust."

"You'd better," says he, "for when Jetmore says three days he don't mean four."

"I mailed the letter and check in Horton that afternoon, and next day—that was Friday—I goes over to Horton on the very first train, and pedestriates into Jetmore's office on the stroke of ten."

"Jetmore met me cordial like a mule that's just found something to kick. He'd smelled my money."

"Did you get it?" says I.

"He pulled out the check I'd mailed in Horton the day before. I looked at it over his shoulder, him holdin' on with both hands."

"I guess about fifty of that belongs to you," says I.

"Fifty?" says he. "Fifty?"

"No," says I, "I only said it once."

"That's what comes of gettin' into the clutches of one of them grafters, Bandy. But I let it go at a hundred to preserve my own interests."

"Well," says I, "give me the check."

"Give me my hundred," says he.

"I ain't got it," says I.

"Then we'll cash the check," says he, and puts on his coat and hat.

"Bandy, ain't that pitiful? Ain't it pitiful?"

"It was comin' so easy I yawned right in his face. Says he, 'then we'll cash the check.' Oh, the big fat boob!"

"We goes down to the bank, and Jetmore steps up to the window."

"Good-morning, Mr. Jetmore," says the teller, obsequies-like.

"Jetmore takes a pen, indorses the check, and passes it through the window."

"Give it to us in hundreds," says he.

"Not for me," says I, steppin' up. "Make it twenties."

"The teller counts out ten twenties, slaps 'em on top of a pile with a bandage on 'em, and shoves 'em through the window to Jetmore. He counts off five and I sticks the rest in my pocket."

"Better count 'em," says Jetmore.

"I'll take a chance," says I. "The young man looks honest." The truth is, I was beginning to get the shivers.

"Me and Jetmore turned to go. Just as we reached the door I felt that pile of twenties jump right out of my pocket and slap me in the face. Standin' there lookin' at us was Devlin."

"Hello, Jetmore," says he. Good-morning, Mr. Delman."

"Bandy, stand up. No man can sit unrespectful while I relate the sequence. It fills my eyes with tears to think of it. I've been a modest man, but this is too much for me. I must tell the truth."

"I was in a hole, all right, but I still had hold of the rope. I knew that Devlin thinks I'm Leo and Jetmore thinks I'm Abe, and as long as they didn't get a chin on it I was safe."

"Mr. Devlin," says I, "I'm glad to see you. There's a little matter I want to ask you about."

"Jetmore started to spout before Devlin could answer and I interspersed."

"It's an important matter," says I, "and I won't keep you long."

"Devlin stood lookin' at us like he didn't understand. Of course, Jetmore knew I knew Devlin, because I'd told him he was mine and Leo's lawyer before the fight."

"Jetmore pulls out his watch and starts to go."

"I've got an appointment," says he. "I'll see you later. Drop around to the office about one." Then he turns to me. "Come in and say good-by," says he, and off he goes.

"It took me about two minutes to explain to Devlin that I'd come up to Horton to try to get Jetmore to chop off a hundred on the settlement. Devlin laughed."

"Jetmore don't do no choppin'," says he.

"Right you are," says I. "He won't even give me no extra time."

"What was it you wanted to ask me?" says he.

"Mr. Devlin," says I, "I'm a poor man. Whether I get that twelve hundred I don't know. But I got friends in Pittsburgh what's got it, and if you'll let me have fifty back for railroad fare, I'll make it a hundred when I settle up."

"Devlin blinked hard, and I thought he'd jumped it. But bein' a grafter, that hundred looked too good to lose. He pulls out a big black wallet, counts out five tens, and hands 'em to me careful-like."

"Delman," says he, "I know you're an honest man. I can tell it by your eyes. I feel sure you'll get the money."

"Mr. Devlin," says I, holdin' his hand in one hand and the fifty in the other, "I will get the money." And I leaves him standin' there in the bank, watchin' me through the window."

"Did you go to Pittsburgh?" asked Bandy.

"Bandy," said Dudd, "don't be factious in the presence of genius. You offend me."

"Forgive me," said Bandy, humbly. "Let me see the fifty, Dudd. I just want to touch it."

SCHOOL DAYS

THE WHY OF SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

FLOATING NEEDLES

FLOAT two cambric needles in a basin of water and name the needles after an unmarried man and woman. If the needles float together the persons they are named for will marry; if they do not, no marriage. This is an old and common form of divination in most rural localities and is born of the ancient, primitive nomancy, or magic of names, and of ordinary sympathetic magic. As has been stated the ancients regarded a man's name as practically the ego of the man.

If an enemy got hold of a man's name he could hoodoo the man by hoodooing his name. Practically all peoples living in a primitive state today hold this belief of nomancy. Now when the needles are given the names of persons they become, for all magical purposes, the persons themselves. If the needles—magically the persons whose names are used—float together by the simple operation of homeopathic magic—like producing like—so will the real persons come together in marriage; if they don't, they won't. This superstition is a good example of the survival of a piece of primitive magic, unaltered and unornamented, from the earliest times.

SANDWICHES

THE savory accessories for sandwich making may be prepared and kept for weeks at a time if in the ice chest. Butters of parsley, green pepper, mint and other flavors are easily prepared and add greatly to the variety and tastiness of sandwiches. For green pepper butter, cook green peppers after removing the seeds and white fiber, until soft, in boiling water; chop fine and rub through a sieve, add creamed butter and cayenne pepper and use for spreading bread instead of plain butter.

Lobster Fingers.

Finely chop cold boiled lobster meat. Season with salt, paprika and a few grains of cayenne or moisten with French dressing. Cut sandwich bread into thin slices, spread half of them with the green pepper butter and the remaining slices with lobster mixture. Put together in pairs, press edges lightly and cut each sandwich in three pieces, finger-sized. Garnish with parsley.

Savory Ham Sandwiches.

Cream one-half cupful of butter, add one teaspoonful of made mustard, a few grains of cayenne and one cupful of finely minced ham. Moisten with mayonnaise dressing until of the consistency to spread, seasoning with salt if needed. Spread on rye or graham bread, using the green pepper butter on half the slices.

Cream Cheese and Peanut Butter.

Work one cream cheese with two and one-half cupfuls of peanut butter. Season with salt and spread the mixture on thin slices of graham bread, put together in pairs, remove crusts and cut into fancy shapes. Serve with tea and cubes of sugar well rubbed over washed oranges. The essential oil will flavor and color the sugar; add to orange pekoe tea. Maple sugar grated, cream and chopped nuts, make a delicious sweet sandwich filling that the children will enjoy.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day, lucky jewel

HELENA

ONE of the many curious etymological circumstances which makes a contraction as popular and prevalent as the original name is illustrated by the case of Helena and Helen. The former title is the correct one and bears complete individual existence apart from Helen; yet the two names are frequently considered identical and interchangeable.

Helena was really the name most noted among all the Greeks, not Helen. It comes direct from the Greek masculine name Helenos, meaning light or bright. But when Aeschylus, playing upon the word, made it come from the Greek term signifying "ship-destroying," it seemed the direct equivalent of Helen.

In Rome, Helena was almost as popular as in Greece. It was finally borne by the lady who was the wife of Constantius Chlorus, the mother of Constantine, and the restorer of the shrines at Jerusalem. St. Helena, holding the true cross, was ever afterward revered by East and West. The English held her in high esteem, claiming that their country was her birthplace, though she is believed to have been born at Bithynia.

The yellow jacinth is Helena's talismanic stone. It will bring her protection from evil and will guard her from misfortune when she travels, if she wears the gem around her neck. Tuesday is her lucky day and 5 her lucky number.

The Hotel Stenographer

"LUCKY woman," exclaimed the Hotel Stenographer.

"Rich?" asked the House Detective. "A widow," answered the girl as if that explained it. "A live husband is a necessity," she went on, "but a dead one is a luxury. That ladybird has all the advantages of being married and none of the handicaps."

"The only imperfection of widowhood is that you have to take a chance on matrimony to reach it. A woman always has to pay for any happiness she has in the world while men are lords of creation from the day they announce the glad tidings to their friends that 'It's a boy!'"

"A widow is as lucky as an only child. She can go anywhere she pleases and do what she pleases with nobody to tell her where she must get off."

"A single girl has to consider what he will say when he comes. She is always looking for that day when Mr. Right will arrive. Her conduct is regulated by the impression her doings will make on him. But with the widow he has come and gone and left his bank roll and she is all jake."

"There is a funny streak in all good women. They all like to be considered little devils. The widow accomplishes it by simply being a widow, so that adds to her happiness, too."

"There is nothing any woman likes so much as aggravating other women. All the single girls hate a widow because she has accomplished something they have not been able to get away with and all the married women look through the wires and envy the widow because she not only gets the cheese but got out of the trap also. The widow's life road is a good road everywhere and she rolls along without a single valve tap."

"A single girl meets too many thank-you-ma'ns and bumps too many bumps. That's why she is always trying to marry out of the rut."

THE SIMPLICITY OF LINCOLN

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WITHOUT perfection such as fame Would give you now, nor yet to blame For errors charged against you then.

You loom so high o'er other men That men may oftentimes forget Your greatest greatness: It was met Not in the greatness many see But in your great simplicity.

To that high office that we call The highest eminence of all You brought a spirit lowly, brought The simple truths that Nancy taught.

And touched a title with the gleam Of brotherhood, and made it seem Indeed a nobler thing to be Than any crown of majesty.

For that we love you, Lincoln—for The plain humanity you wore In all your greatness, standing thus Beside mankind, not over us.

And this I truly have believed: That all the good that you achieved, The things accomplished, came to be Because of your simplicity.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

THE SILENT CONFLICT

AS BETWEEN the roaring guns of a contending armies on the field of battle, and the silent conflict which noble men and women have with the evil spirit in the solitude of night, or in the bustle of the busy day, there is but slight difference.

When all things are considered, the contentions of the armies and the intentions of the lone individual, the silent conflict is frequently the more difficult of the two.

Accustomed for years to look on pernicious habits with complacency, the thoughtful man or woman frequently awakens to the terrible wreck he or she is making of opportunity and life.

There is born in an instant a resolve to break the trammels, to pull away from perilous positions and seek a new haven of peace and safety.

Then begins the stern struggle in a world hushed from the ears of others, who may pass by without suspecting the tumult in the soul of him or her who is making a last stand, fighting valiantly inch by inch to overcome the invisible enemy.

It is easy to read about a conquering hero, but it requires hard exertion of will power and unyielding strength to become one.

Hitherto the man or woman had found it good policy to drift along blindly, but now, in the new light, all things are changed.

That which was seductive is now repulsive, hateful, horrible.

The good, sunny part of nature lifts up its trembling hands to the sky and cries earnestly for deliverance from galling bondage.

And if the shackled soul be true to itself, true to the faith which was born in a night, this fine spark of nobility will eventually find the freedom it craves, for there is nothing impossible to him or her who can outstride the shadow of doubt.

The ride may be hazardous, up dizzy elevations, down dismal gulfs, over treacherous quicksands, through lands of temptations and snared pits of iniquity, but the clean, cool summit in the distance is waiting with outstretched arms to bestow on him or her who presses on in belief, the unspeakable peace for which the silent conflict is waged.

Ride on through the minutes of Time, ye brave, and the ages of Eternity will give you enduring bliss!

ADVANCE SPRING FROCKS; INTERESTING MIDSEASON HATS

IT IS a matter for rejoicing that another season of plaits is scheduled for the coming months. As to plaited skirts, they are a certainty. In endless variety are they appearing, expressing both new and old lines of thought.

To the blouse, however, is given the honor of presenting a most unusual interpretation of plaits, in that they are arranged in the form of inset panels at each side front, as this pic-old, on with the new" is the message these hats for immediate wear convey to the world of fashion.

A favorite medium for these early millinery harbingers of spring is taffeta in such refreshing colors as lovebird green, pale Nile and palmetto, for green leads the procession of tones and tints for the coming season. There is also a vast showing of rose pink tones. Silvery gray, too, is being featured. In fact, the whole trend is to-ture so smartly defines. In this charming model we have cut-in pockets, sleeves and semi-yoke in one piece, the entire posed over a simple across-the-front plaited skirt.

In these tailored two-piece frocks which are destined to occupy the center of the fashion stage there is also considerable use of pin-tucks and scallops, as well as plaits. The simplest application of scallops is that which outlines the hem edges of the blouse as well as the bottom of the flare skirt. Matching scarf collars tied in choker fashion about the throat are very numerous. They bespeak the extreme of the present mode.

Materials add to the glory of these new two-piece sports and street costumes. Flat crepe, radium crepe faille and crepe de chine are the most popular fabrics, particularly in alward lovely pastel solid colorings and blendings.

There are two distinct tendencies registered in these hats for immediate wear. One is that of extreme simplicity, the other bespeaks the highly ornate. Included in the former are little shapes of the pull-on, close-fitting variety which rely solely on color effect and clever manipulation of the fabric. For these smart interseason modes, belting ribbon is especially in use. Many of the imports show a remarkable combination of ribbons cut in sections of contrasting color, working out futuristic cubes, diamonds and squares.

Competing for honors with these hats of tailored simplicity are the adorably cunning taffeta models which revel in elaborate handwork of riotous coloring. Sometimes tiny ombre ribbons are worked in flowers on a pastel-luring pastel tones, which bespeak the very quintessence of refinement. In this range of more than ordinarily interesting spring dress colorings are beautiful silvery grays, rose-bole tones, bois de rose, apricot, salmon pink, sea shell, artistic blues such as periwinkle, pearly violet and a remarkable range of greens including citron, chartreuse and palmetto. Black, white, navy and sand also retain a practical style value.

Out-of-the-ordinary color combinations are also achieved in a tailored way, in that a periwinkle blue silk crepe blouse and skirt are each apt to be banded with pink-mauve borderings. A citron-colored frock may have its scalloped piped with white, and so the effects will be continued ad infinitum throughout the season.

Though winter has not yet bid its adieu, fashion is flirting with spring, coaxing it to come in advance of schedule time. In the meantime, the milliner, always most forward in challenging the calendar, is sending forth legions of charming midseason chapeaux in springlike colorings. "Off with the colored taffeta background, similar to the first hat shown in this group. Perhaps the designer chooses to use metal soutache, tubular multicolored braid and silk floss in many shades, as the model to the right so prettily expresses. Even the larger hats indulge in color and applique as shown third in the picture. Flowers shirred of varicolored taffeta carry out the thought of much handwork and spring tones. The hat illustrated last carries out this idea.

A most popular item in the new hats is the all-over shirred taffeta model in gay spring coloring.

HOW TO MAKE VARIOUS VEGETABLE CHIPS

Using a Deep Frying Kettle to Make Potato Chips.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Potato chips are not difficult to prepare at home with ordinary household equipment. An accurate vegetable slicer is needed, as it is almost impossible to slice the potatoes thinly and evenly enough by hand. A deep frying kettle is best, especially if it has an inner perforated pan or basket to fit it for lowering and raising the potatoes in the fat. A thermometer which will register more than 400 degrees F. is also advisable for uniform results. Use mature potatoes, high in starch, for making chips. Large or medium-sized, smooth, round potatoes with shallow eyes are best.

Time for Cooking.

Dasheens, which are well known in the South, and Jerusalem artichokes also make delicious chips. Jerusalem artichokes, however, only require soaking for thirty minutes, and dasheens from one to two hours, but the potato slices are soaked from three to four hours in cold running water before being fried. The longer period of soaking or washing in comparison with dasheens and artichokes is necessary in order to remove the free starch grains on the cut surfaces, thereby preventing the adhesion of one slice to the other, and to chill and firm them, thus making them easier to handle. If running water is not available the water should be changed every hour.

The vegetables to be made into chips are first peeled, either by hand or by a special peeling machine. If a large quantity of chips is to be made, and all eyes are carefully removed. They are then sliced very thin, and given a bath in cold running water, which helps to remove free surface starch grains. They are next soaked in clear cold water the required length of time. Shake off as much of the water as possible after soaking them, and dry between towels. Dasheen chips are dried in the same way before frying. The fat should have a temperature of 400 degrees F. when the chips are put in it and after each batch is cooked it should be reheated to this point before a fresh lot of chips are put in. If a large quantity of chips is being made the fat should be strained from time to time; otherwise any small floating particles of potato can be skimmed out.

Cottonseed Oil Is Best.

High-grade cottonseed oil is the best fat to use for frying chips. Vegetable oils or compounds give better results than animal fats. No fat with a smoking point of less than 425 degrees F. is satisfactory. Care should be taken not to cook too many chips at once. The fat should be deep enough to cover the slices completely and allow them to lie flat and be crisped over quickly in from three to five minutes. They should be gently stirred while in the fat.

When the chips are delicately browned, the basket is raised, the excess fat is drained off, and the chips are emptied on brown paper to dry and lightly sprinkle with salt. Chips cooked in high-grade oil keep sweet several weeks in cold weather. Approximately half a pound of oil will be required for every pound of chips, says the United States Department of Agriculture. This is not all absorbed in the chips, but includes fat splattered in cooking and taken up by crumbs skimmed out from time to time. Even when chips are made commercially the oil is not used more than two or three days, and in the home, if chips are made at intervals, it is best to start each time with good, fresh oil, finding some other way to use the oil that has had chips fried in it.

NUMBER OF WAYS FOR USING NUTS

Select With Care to Avoid Too Rich Combination.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In suggesting a number of ways in which nuts may appear on the table, the United States Department of Agriculture reminds the housekeeper that nuts are rich in fat and that the other ingredients of a meal at which nuts are used should be selected with care to avoid too rich a combination of foods. The term "kernel" is preferred to "nut meats" in speaking of the shelled nuts. Nuts bought already shelled should be looked over carefully for small pieces of shell, then washed and dried in the oven before being used.

Nuts are good in almost any kind of a sandwich, and when the school lunch is a problem, a filling of chopped-nut kernels with raisins, dates, figs or prunes, will prove a solution. Nuts and olives go well together in sandwiches, nuts with cottage or cream cheese, and nuts with maple or plain brown sugar. It is a good plan to keep a jar of shelled nuts on the emergency shelf for these and other uses. Peanut butter as a sandwich filling is familiar to everyone. It can be made at home by putting the roasted shelled nuts through the meat grinder, and then stirring in enough cream or melted butter to make a smooth paste.

A cream cheese ball can be rolled in chopped nuts and served as an accessory to almost any kind of salad. Celery stalks stuffed with nuts and cheese are often used in a similar way. A few nuts in a fruit, apple, or vegetable salad are a distinct improvement. Even in a potato salad they add an unusual touch. Boiled chestnut kernels make an excellent salad. When Persian walnut kernels are used in salad or for other purposes, in the raw condition, the little dark spot at the center of the kernel should be removed as it has a bitter taste.

Nut breads of various kinds never lose their popularity. The cakes and cookies with nuts mixed into them or used on top or in the filling, are too numerous to describe. Nuts may be used in many substantial dishes and desserts and in confections of all sorts.

Renovating Pillows Is One Task of Homemaker

One of the tasks which confront the homemaker when the house is being cleaned and put in order for winter is the proper cleaning of the pillows. The United States Department of Agriculture considers that the most satisfactory method is to transfer the feathers to a muslin bag two or three times the size of the ticking. This may be done easily by sewing the edges of the openings of the ticking and bag together and shaking the feathers from one to the other.

The feathers and the ticking are washed separately. To wash the feathers, after sewing them in the muslin bag, scrub them in a weak solution of washing soda, using a good suds. If necessary this is repeated in a second suds. Rinse in two or three lukewarm rinses. If an extractor-type of washing machine is available, extract as much moisture as possible, and then dry the feathers on a sheet in the sun. If one has no machine of this type, squeeze out as much of the excess water as possible and dry in the same way. Beat from time to time during the process.

After washing the ticking, starch it on the inside with a very stiff starch mixture applied with a sponge. This closes the pores of the material and prevents the feathers from working their way through. The ticking is then dried and refilled.

The pillows themselves may be washed without removing the feathers, in much the same way as the feathers are washed when transferred to the muslin bag as described above. A slip cover between the ticking and the pillow case will prevent the ticking from becoming soiled easily and do away with unnecessary washing of the pillow. Slip covers may be made of a lightweight muslin. They are then taken off and washed from time to time and tacked back in place.

Honey and Sugar Sirup

Honey or a homemade mixture of honey and sugar sirup can be satisfactorily used for sweetening lemonade and other fruit drinks. Sirup of any kind is more convenient for this purpose than undissolved sugar, and when charged water is to be added it has a further advantage since it has less tendency to expel the gas. It is the custom of many housewives to keep a homemade sirup for this purpose, and variety can be obtained by occasionally using honey.

Nujol helps Nature in Nature's own way

"Yes, Billie, and I felt old. No appetite, couldn't sleep nights—one day just like another, and none of them any good. I knew constipation was at the bottom of it, but it seemed the more laxatives I took the worse I got. Then one day I saw Nell giving Nujol to my little grandson. The doctor had prescribed it for the baby, but I found out it's just the thing for old fellows like me, too."

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. Nujol simply softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles. It is not a medicine.

You can take Nujol for any length of time without ill effects. It should be taken regularly in accordance with the directions on each bottle. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.

THE PETEET TRAGEDY

four, all at once, has attracted the notice of the Mexican government, and an officer was sent to investigate. He took the lid off of hell to see what was under it. He saw, and will purge it; more power to him! It is hoped he will also clean up Mexicali. To be sure, everybody knows what Tijuana is like. Then, why go there? Is it because like atoms attract. Talk of civilization—bah! It may be a little harder now for those "highly respected" citizens of San Diego, called bootleggers, to get their supplies for a while, but if their customers have to do with a little less, it will do them no harm.

Of course those thugs who have escaped the laws of California, and are at the bottom of all this trouble, will be sent back, and turned loose on us again, to play their murderous game. If they were as black outside as they are inside, they would be lynched on sight, but as they are not negroes, they are in no danger. No doubt some, who have been their partners on this side of the line, will give them a good welcome back.

Yours in disgust,

COLLEGE BASEBALL

REMAINS MAJOR SPORT

Is college baseball going to be relegated to the minor sport ranks? "Not if the University of Southern California has anything to do with it," answers Gwynn Wilson, general manager of the Trojan institution. After building the S. Because middle western and Rocky mountain universities were not interested, Wilson failed to secure a triad east, but plans are now being formulated for a summer tour.

COUNTY BOY SCOUTS

DON'T HANG UP AFTER CALLING NUMBER FOR
TELEPHONE CONNECTION

Mr. C. A. Stevens, manager of the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph company in San Diego county, makes the following interesting statement:

Sometimes people are called to the telephone, only to be informed that there is no one on the line, and almost always they blame the operator.

But is it the operator's fault?

It may be and sometimes it is, but very often the call is what is termed an abandoned call, and the operator is in no way to blame. Someone gives a number to the operator, is interrupted or changes his mind for some reason, and hangs up the receiver before the number is obtained. Or he may discover he has made a mistake in giving the number and so hangs up rather than wait to explain to the wrong party. Or the right number is called and the answering party is slow in responding, so that the impatient calling party does not wait for the call to be completed, but hangs up. Most persons do not stop to think that many people do not have extension telephones in their homes and must go from one end of the house to the other in answering the telephone.

So it is not always the operator who is at fault when she says, "There is no one on the line now. Will you excuse it, please?"

GAS COMPANY PAYS

BIG FRANCHISE TAX

Each succeeding year the San Diego Consolidated Gas and Electric company pays a larger franchise tax to the city. The increase in this utility furnishes excellent proof of civic growth. The tax for 1925 amounted to $40,983, being about $6,000 above the budget estimate by the council. The company is taxed on its gas, power and steam gross earnings. There is no tax on electricity furnished for the lighting of homes, as this is not allowed by state law.
